

CIS Research Division Annual Report 2018

February 2019

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

It is with great pleasure that we present the first annual report of the Research Division for the period July 2017 to June 2018. We were able to accomplish a lot within this short period of time and we are especially proud of the launch of research clusters. The introduction of research clusters is in tandem with the trend in contemporary research which recognizes the need for collaboration of researchers possessing expert knowledge in different areas to solve a problem of common interest. Isolated research silos is an obsolescent concept which is giving way to research clusters wherein researchers with varied knowledge and expertise are able to pool in their resources more constructively to produce superior work. These research clusters will, we believe, provide the ideal ecosystem at CIS to initiate and pursue complex research questions to achieve its goal of becoming a world-class college for knowledge production and transfer while also more effectively contribute towards achieving the goals of Qatar National Vision, 2030. In the first cycle of the Research Clusters, CIS-RD has sanctioned 17 research projects. A total sum of QAR 285,000 was awarded to the projects, of which around QAR 150,000 has been disbursed. Some of the major highlights and achievements of the first cycle projects are as follows:

These research clusters will, we believe, provide the ideal ecosystem at CIS to initiate and pursue complex research questions to achieve its goal of becoming a world-class college for knowledge production and transfer while also more effectively contribute towards achieving the goals of Qatar National Vision, 2030. In the first cycle of the Research Clusters, CIS-RD has sanctioned 17 research projects. A total sum of QAR 285,000 was awarded to the projects, of which around QAR 150,000 has been disbursed. Some of the major highlights and achievements of the first cycle projects are as follows:

- ⇒ Successfully held a conference on the topic of Circular Economy
- ⇒ Initiated discussions with Cambridge to collaborate on setting up a Center for Alternative Finance for the MENA region
- ⇒ Organized a Global conference on Awqaf
- ⇒ Produced an initial case study report for Qatar Development Bank on their transformation journey from a conventional to an Islamic banking institution
- ⇒ 3 NPRI, 7 CWSP and other grants from the industry such as QFC and QDB

During 2017 and 2018, 63 books/book chapters and 62 refereed journal articles were published by the CIS faculty. 113 events were conducted by CIS during these two years which included public lectures, conferences, seminars, symposiums and roundtables.

ABOUT US

HAMAD BIN KHALIFA UNIVERSITY

Hamad Bin Khalifa University (HBKU), a member of Qatar Foundation for Education, Science and Community Development (QF), was founded in 2010 as a research-intensive university that acts as a catalyst for transformative change in Qatar and the region while having a global impact. Located in Education City, HBKU is committed to building and cultivating human capacity through an enriching academic experience, innovative ecosystem and unique partnerships. HBKU delivers multidisciplinary undergraduate and graduate programs through its colleges and provides opportunities for research and scholarship through its institute and centers.

COLLEGE OF ISLAMIC STUDIES

HBKU's College of Islamic Studies (CIS) was founded to become a beacon for contemporary Islamic scholarship and thought, and a platform for meaningful intellectual and cultural dialogue on Islam and Muslims. Through its five academic offerings and four research centers, the college seeks to address some of the most pressing questions facing Muslim communities today, both locally and globally. Through its offerings, the college strives to advance a better understanding of Islam and its social dimensions and to produce graduates who can contribute and excel in a rapidly changing world.

RESEARCH DIVISION

Research Division (CIS-RD) of College of Islamic Studies has been established to expand the understanding of Islamic studies; contribute to global intellectual debates on Islam as a religion, culture and civilization; and respond to contemporary challenges and societal and economic transformations within the Muslim world and beyond. The primary purpose of RD is to support the CIS faculty to pursue research and development, and scholarly and creative activities among themselves along with external industry and academic collaborations. RD exists to enhance the educational and research activities of CIS and to provide the critical mass, required to attain international recognition; pursue grants and partner with other institutions and industry. Research cluster approach under RD has been introduced and implemented specifically with this purpose in mind. Research clusters offer a fluid, interdisciplinary, flexible ecosystem for CIS research efforts and output to achieve excellence. RD provides the foundation to the CIS faculty for conducting collective scholarly activities. RD endeavors to serve the mission of CIS in transforming Qatar into a knowledge-based society by promoting Islamic values, heritage and contribution to humanity through education and research.

ALIGNMENT WITH CIS OBJECTIVES

The activities of the Research Division should broadly cater to the following 7 strategic initiatives of CIS, thereby contributing to the achievement of the overall objectives of CIS:

CIS Objective 1: Achieve Excellence in Education, Research, and Publication

Initiatives

Initiate and implement Research Clusters
Increase external research grants
Foster national priorities academic and research projects

CIS Objective 2: Promote CIS Exposure and Visibility

Initiatives

Establish communications and agreements with academic publishers
Partner with major Islamic Studies Centers in the region and the world
Disseminate CIS research production

CIS Objective 3: Cultivate and Develop Competitive Students

Initiatives

Increase student engagement in research

OUR ECOSYSTEM

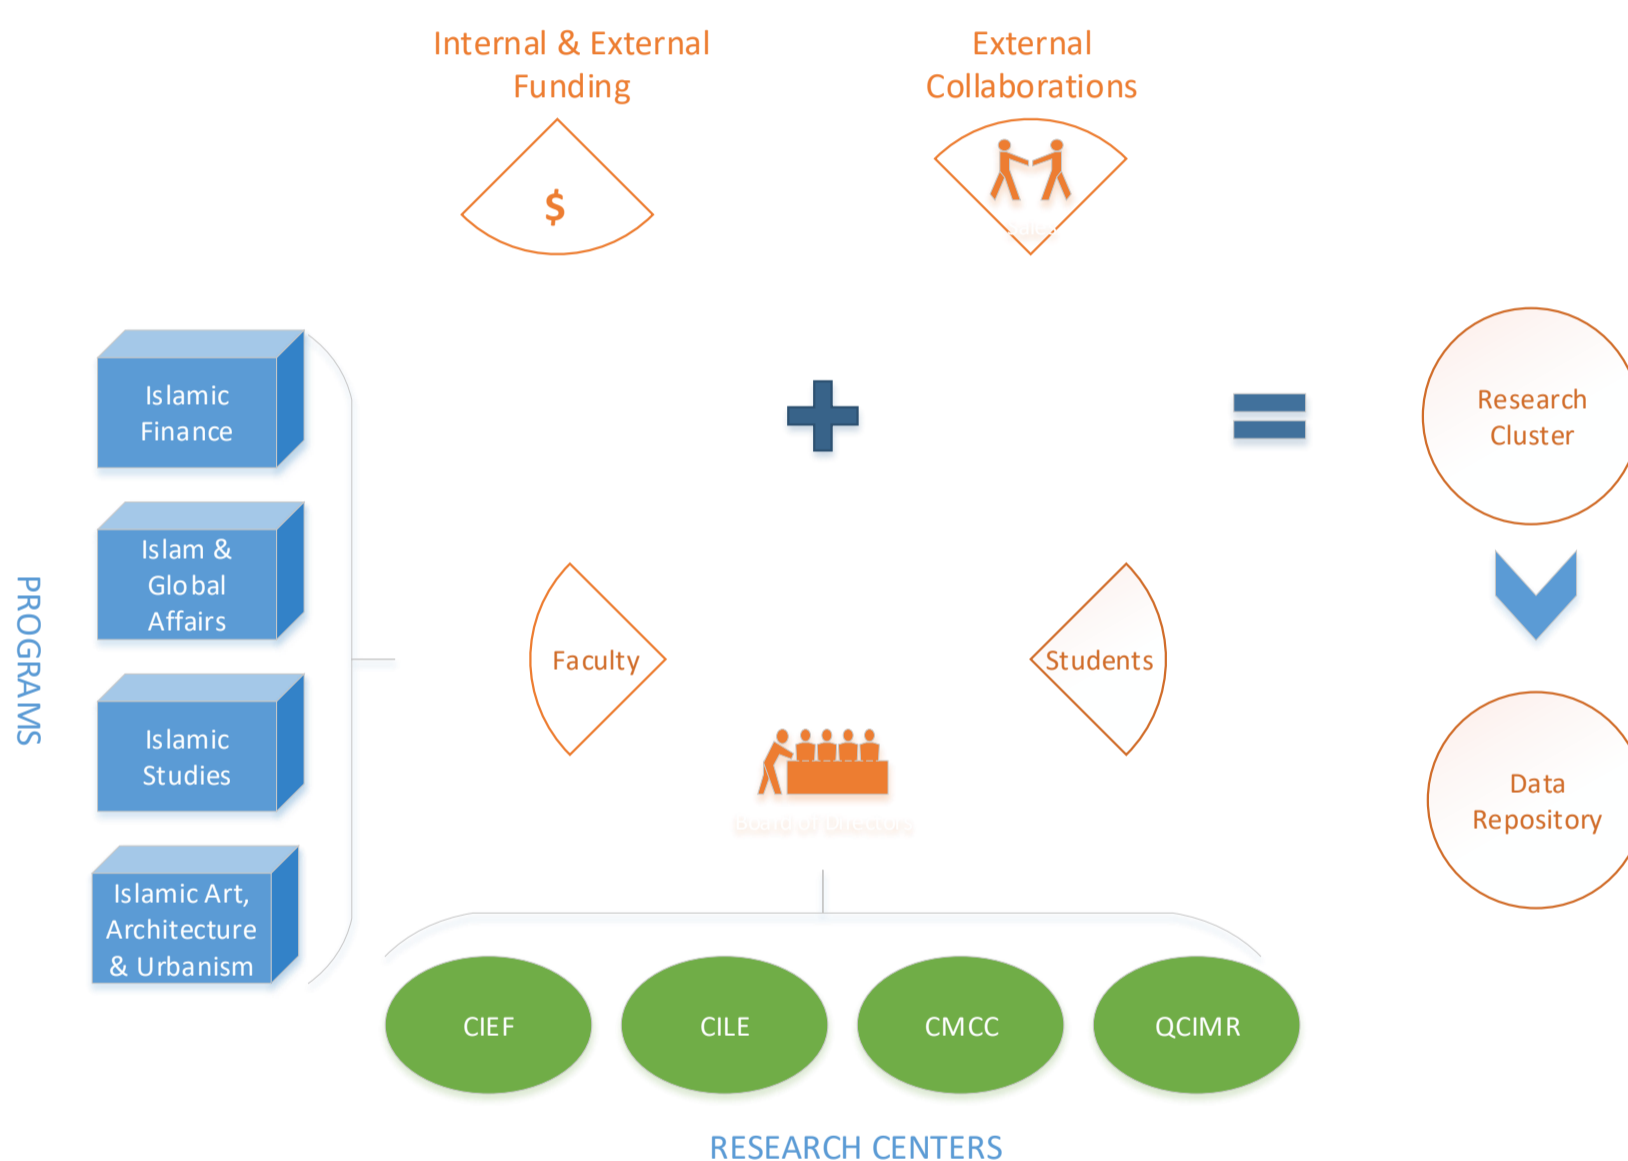

Research Division was initiated during the academic year 2017-18 to assess and support research and knowledge production within CIS faculty and research staff. Moreover, Research Division aspires to be a platform which contributes to global intellectual debates on Islam as a religion, culture and civilization; and responds to contemporary challenges and societal transformations within the Muslim world and beyond. Research Division through its research clusters provides an inclusive, fluid and multi-stakeholder ecosystem. It enables an Research Division aims to increase research output at CIS including organizing events, publications, media reporting as well as writing grant proposals. With regard to publications, through research clusters, RD will encourage publications in peer reviewed indexed journals (with high impact factor) for wider dissemination.

Research Division also endeavors to project the work of the CIS faculty and researchers to external parties including industry and academia through public lectures, conferences and roundtables along with the Data Repository. It will simultaneously, also endeavor to support the CIS faculty and researchers in being updated with the external research activities in their respective fields. It is hoped that the above activities along with efforts to environment which stimulates learning and collaborative research while capitalizing on the existing resources of CIS and synergies, both within and with external parties. Research clusters is based on a horizontal network system as opposed to vertical hierarchical system which provides an egalitarian platform for research ensuring maximum participation from a multitude of stakeholders and local/international actors.

create opportunities for interaction and dialogue among the parties mentioned will create a virtuous loop of greater collaborative learning and research work.

OUR REVIEW PROCESS

For any project proposal to qualify for the Research Clusters, it must foremost qualify as a good research work, grounded in theory, with a base in the research literature and backed by the work done by others in the field while being incremental in nature. The research problem being addressed must be new, in alignment with the goals and scope of the relevant research cluster and fills an existing gap in the field. It has to be feasible and certainly do-able within the timeframe and the proposed budget. The proposal is typically vetted by area experts who are expected to have the authority to comment on the soundness and feasibility of the project proposal.

While evaluating a project proposal and deciding on the allocations of funds, project deliverable quality and promptness of the applicant's RC projects in the previous cycles is given special weightage. Any affiliations and collaborations in the proposed project with other institutions or multi-faculty/ inter-departmental/ inter-disciplinary nature of the project attracts additional credit during the evaluation stage.

A comprehensive 'Research Project Document' is required to be submitted before the end of the project tenure for which the applicants are required to work with the RD team to solicit ISBN. Applicants are encouraged to take the project to the next level by taking various steps such as applying to CWSP, NPRP and others to avail funding for their projects.

In the long term, the projects from the Research Clusters are expected to have one or more of the following deliverables:

- ⇒ Articles in refereed journals
- ⇒ Books with reputed publishers
- ⇒ Innovations, patents, IP and other products

HIGHLIGHTS

RESEARCH CLUSTERS

Research Cluster which was conceptualised in order to support and promote research and knowledge production within CIS faculty and research staff successfully completed its first cycle during the reporting period. In this time, 17 research projects were sanctioned under 8 research clusters. A total sum of QAR 285,000 was awarded to the projects which are expected to yield 8 books, 9 journal articles along with 12 seminars and workshops. The Research Division team will be facilitating the cluster identification and grouping process after Cycle # 2 projects are awarded and begin to operate in early 2019.

PUBLICATIONS & EVENTS

CIS-RD has taken the responsibility to produce and disseminate reports on all the events conducted by various centers, starting with the CIEF related events since 2011 whose detailed list is shared in the appendix. This process will be replicated for the other centers in due course.

CIS-RD studies the trends in the industry and the academia along with the research activities and interests of the faculty to then identify areas of maximum relevance and suitability, especially in the context of Qatar and its 2030 vision to arrange seminars, symposiums, roundtables and conferences which can bring the stakeholders on a single platform to brainstorm the issues, leading to academic reports and publications which can then be disseminated to the wider public. CID-RD has organised/co-organised several events, a few of which are highlighted in later in this report while the detailed list is shared in the appendix. It has also coordinated the production of CIS Dean's report.

CIS DATABANK

RD is actively involved in creating HBKU CIS repository which will be a world-class online resource for researchers and students in Islamic studies, available both in Arabic and English. This will try to fill the current void and provide a much needed databank in niche areas related to Islamic studies. The aim is to bring together all academic resources on Islamic economics and finance and eventually the other areas of Islamic studies, to provide a one-stop authentic information center for researchers, faculty members and practitioners. Islamic Economics and Finance is the first component of this project which commenced in 2016. Currently it holds over 7000 unique records both in Arabic and English with full verified bibliographic data. Abstracts and full-text can also be found in cases. A full-fledged acquisition program through a wide research network is underway. Through this program, it will be easy to acquire authentic data from primary and secondary sources to make the databank a solid comprehensive tool. RD has worked on the databank development, dissemination platform and the user interface.

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

Research fellowship program has been initiated which is expected to provide assistance to research projects while at the same time give opportunities to candidates to acquire professional skills needed to pursue their career path in their chosen fields. For the current year, five positions have been approved, of which three have been filled: CIS-DataBank, CIS-Research Division and Global Affairs Program.

RESEARCH CLUSTERS

Research clusters are virtual entities within which several related projects are undertaken together. Following are the 8 research clusters which have been envisioned based on the existing programs, research centers and publicly available research outputs of CIS faculty and researchers:

Islamic Finance

- This cluster will be dedicated to the interdisciplinary study of the Islamic banking and financial industry along with the study of relationship between the Islamic faith and economic phenomenon pertaining to the behavior of individuals, institutions, and markets.
- This includes broadly examining Islamic perspectives on production, redistribution and exchange.

Religion, Science, and Education

- This cluster will critically analyze some of the most pressing issues regarding science education in contemporary Muslim societies; to discuss ways to address these challenges; and to offer recommendations to inform the current efforts to enhance scientific literacy in contemporary Muslim societies.
- The cluster will also examine the impact of Islamic institutions on scientific and religious literacy.

Moral Economies

- This cluster will seek to theorize the concept of the Islamic moral economy and to address the contemporary challenges of capitalism faced by Muslims.
- The cluster will also examine Islamic components of the moral economy, such as social and behavioral norms, and the role and functioning of Islamic economic institutions such as zakat and Waqf.

Identity and Urban Life

- This cluster will host contemporary theoretical and critical discourses in relation to identity and urban life.
- Contributions will illustrate the importance of the nexus between Islamic values, Muslim identities, and urbanization.

Religion and Innovation

- This is a cross-disciplinary cluster, which addresses 21st century challenges and their impact on Islamic jurisprudence, and developing innovative Islamic solutions that meet the needs of Muslims in their daily lives.

Sustainable Development

- This cluster tackles issues pertaining to sustainable development in Muslim states.
- Through various projects, the cluster will shed light on the theoretical debates and practical discussions revolving around institutional dynamics, contextual barriers and other factors that affect development in its integral sense within the Muslim World.

Islam, Civilization, and History

- Islamic civilization has played an extensive role in shaping the world as we see it today.
- This cluster will explore Islamic civilizational aspects in order to develop further understanding of the Islamic contribution to human civilization.

Islam and Global Affairs

- This cluster will explore the solutions which Islam provides to the issues which are affecting the humanity globally.
